Officers Grounded for Weeks

Police in Framingham, Mass., responding to reports of teenagers tossing eggs at a house in early December got quite a surprise when they tracked down the suspects. A spokesman said those responsible were not teens but were three off-duty law enforcement officers from near-by Newton, who were egging a police sergeant's home. The matter is being handled internally. (AP)

Thief: ‘Man, You Really Can’t Trust Anyone on the Internet’

New York City musician Nadav Nirenberg forgot his iPhone in a cab on New Year's Eve. The next morning, he learned via email that someone was sending messages to women using a dating app on the phone. So Nirenberg logged on to the service, posed as a woman and offered the man a date. When the culprit arrived at Nirenberg's apartment, the musician greeted him while holding a hammer. The thief handed him the iPhone and left. (AP)

Hagel Likely Obama's Defense Pick

Republican's record on Israel stirs opposition within his own party

Washington

President Barack Obama will nominate Chuck Hagel as his next defense secretary, a senior administration official said Sunday, choosing a former Senate colleague and a decorated Vietnam veteran and signaling he's ready for a contentious confirmation fight likely dominated by questions about Hagel's stands on Israel and Iran.

Obama, who avoided a Capitol Hill battle by deciding not to nominate U.N. Ambassador Susan Rice as his first choice for secretary of state, went ahead with Hagel, 66, even as leading Republicans announced their opposition — though they stopped short of saying they try to block Hagel.

Seeking to soften the ground, the White House was alerting Senate Democrats that Hagel's selection as the successor to Defense Secretary Leon Panetta in Obama's second-term Cabinet was imminent, according to a congressional official speaking on condition of anonymity.

Obama, who returned to Washington on Sunday from his Hawaiian vacation, was expected to nominate Hagel on Monday. In an interview that aired last week, Obama called the moderate Republican “a patriot”

President Barack Obama has called former Nebraska Sen. Chuck Hagel, above, a patriot.

Tough Road Ahead for Hagel?

Chuck Hagel has faced withering criticism from Congress since emerging as the front-runner for the Pentagon post. He has criticized discussion of a military strike by either the U.S. or Israel against Iran and backed efforts to bring Iran to the table for talks on future peace in Afghanistan. Sen. Mitch McConnell said Sunday that he was reserving judgment on whether to support Hagel. But McConnell predicted the former Nebraska senator would face serious questions about his stands on Iran and Israel. (AP)

Background

Chuck Hagel, who twice received the Purple Heart for wounds suffered in Vietnam, served in the U.S. Senate for two terms ending in 2009. He was an outspoken and often-independent voice as a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, breaking with many in his party to sharply criticize the management of the Iraq war after he initially supported the invasion. Hagel also has been a strong advocate for veterans, and as a result is “uniquely qualified” to help wind down the Afghan war in the next two years, an administration official said. (THE WASHINGTON POST) who “has done extraordinary work” in the Senate and on Obama's intelligence advisory board.

“This is a controversial pick,” Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., told CNN. “He is an antagonistic figure when it comes to the state of Israel. It's a signal you're sending to Iran at the worst possible time and to our allies.”

The second-ranking Senate Republican, John Cornyn of Texas, said in a statement that making Hagel defense secretary would be “the worst possible message we could send to our friend Israel and the rest of our allies in the Middle East.” Cornyn did not say he would try to block a Hagel nomination. Lawmakers Dig in Heels on the Debt Limit

Congress makes no movement on how to prevent U.S. default

Washington

Congressional leaders on Sunday showed no signs of emerging from their corners to resolve the next step in the financial crisis, with Democrats still talking about higher taxes on the wealthy and the Senate's top Republican suggesting that a crippling default on U.S. loans was possible unless there were significant cuts in government spending.

“It's a shame we have to use whatever leverage we have in Congress to get the president to deal with the biggest problem confronting our future, and that's our excessive spending,” said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky.

Last week's deal to avert the combination of end-of-year tax increases and spending cuts known

“I believe we need to raise the debt ceiling, but if we don't raise it without a plan to get out of debt, all of us should be fired.”

— SEN. LINDSAY GRAHAM, R-S.C., NOT DISMISSING THE IDEA SUNDAY OF ALLOWING A PARTIAL SHUTDOWN OF GOVERNMENT UNTIL AN AGREEMENT CAN BE REACHED ON THE DEBT CRISIS

as the fiscal cliff held income tax rates steady for 99 percent of Americans but left some other major pieces of business unresolved.

By late February or early March, the Treasury Department will run out of options to cover the nation's debts and could begin defaulting on government loans unless Congress raises the legal borrowing limit, or debt ceiling. Economists warn that a default could trigger a global recession.

Also looming are deep automatic spending cuts expected to take effect at the beginning of March that could further erase fragile gains in the U.S. economy. Then on March 27, the temporary measure that funds government activities expires, and congressional approval will be needed to keep the government running. It's one more chance to fight over spending.

Lawmakers said debt talks will consume Congress in the coming weeks, likely delaying any consideration of an expected White House proposal on gun restrictions in the wake of the Connecticut school shooting. ANNE FLAHERTY (AP)

Police respond Saturday to the scene of a barricaded man in Aurora, Colo.

Gunman, 3 Others Die In Standoff

Aurora, Colo.

SWAT officers who stormed a Colorado home where a gunman had holed up found a horrific scene — four dead bodies including that of the gunman.

Police said the armed man fired shots at officers Saturday from a second-story window before officers killed him. Once inside, they found the bodies of three other adults.

The suspect, whose name was withheld by police, held officers at bay for nearly six hours after neighbors reported gunfire at 3 a.m. inside the modest town home in the Denver suburb of Aurora, said police Sgt. Cassidee Carlson.

It wasn't known if officers shot the suspect or if he shot himself.

Investigators said two men and a woman appeared to have been killed before officers arrived.

A fifth person escaped unharmed and called police. A motive for the killings was unknown, and police had yet to say what weapon or weapons were used. P. SOLOMON BANDA (AP)

Defiant Assad Emerges in Syria

In a rare appearance, president pledges to keep fighting rebels

Beirut

A defiant Syrian President Bashar Assad rallied a chanting and cheering crowd Sunday to fight the uprising against his authoritarian rule, dismissing any chance of dialogue with “murderous criminals” whom he blames for nearly two years of violence that has left 60,000 dead.

In his first public speech in six months, Assad laid out terms for a peace plan that keeps himself in power, ignoring international demands to step down and pledging to continue the battle

“as long as there is one terrorist left” in Syria.

“What we started will not stop,” he said, standing at a lectern onstage at the regal Opera House in central Damascus — a sign by the besieged leader that he sees no need to hide or compromise even with the violent civil war closing in on his seat of power in the capital.

The theater was packed with his supporters, who interrupted the speech with applause and cheers.

The overtures that Assad offered — a national reconciliation conference, elections and a new constitution — were reminiscent of symbolic changes and concessions offered previously in the uprising that began in March 2011. Those were rejected at the time as too little, too late.

Supporters surround President Bashar Assad on Sunday in Damascus, Syria, after his first public speech in months.

Assad has spoken only on rare occasions since the uprising began, and Sunday's speech was his first since June. His last public comments came in November.

Assad also demanded that regional and Western countries stop funding and arming the rebels.

“We are now in a state of war in every sense of the word,” Assad said, “a war that targets Syria using a handful of Syrians and many foreigners. It is a war to defend the nation.”

He said Syria will take advice but not dictates from anyone — a reference to outside powers calling on him to step down.

The speech, which was denounced by the West, including the U.S. and Britain, came amid stepped-up international efforts for a peaceful way out of the Syrian conflict. ZEINA KARAM (AP)

This redone stretch of the Beltway near Tysons Corner was recently completed, but Virginia has plenty more road work to do.

Va. Gov. Seeks Roads Fix

McDonnell expected to present plan to put $500M in state coffers

Richmond

Gov. Bob McDonnell is heading into his final year in office hoping to cement his legacy as a problem-solver by taking on one of the most persistent dilemmas in the state: finding a fix for roads.

McDonnell, a Republican, is expected to unveil a proposal next week to pump at least $500 million a year into the commonwealth's transportation coffers by 2018. Without that infusion, a state with one of the nation's largest and most congested transportation systems will be out of road funds by 2017.

Getting his transportation package through the General Assembly in the session that begins next week would be a major coup in the eyes of supporters and burnish McDonnell's reputation as a can-do chief executive.

But in a state weary of high tolls and the legendary traffic in Northern Virginia and Hampton Roads, it poses political risk as well. Critics on the left and right are already taking shots.

Vocal Detractor

Sen. Richard Saslaw, D-Fairfax, takes a dimmer view of Gov. Bob McDonnell's record. He recently spoke out against a $1.4 billion deal to build a 55-mile highway between Petersburg and Suffolk, parallel to Route 460, a lightly traveled road. (TWP)

What's known about McDonnell's package so far, they say, is a retread: McDonnell proposes taking about half of the promised $500 million from the general fund — an idea shot down by the Senate last year, saying it would cheat schools, health care and other core government services.

The battle over McDonnell's transportation plan promises to be one of the most contentious of the session — one that could have huge consequences for both Virginia drivers and an outgoing governor with national aspirations.

McDonnell has not yet disclosed where the rest of the money for his plan would come from. He has hinted that he is open to linking the gas tax to inflation, but that would bring in more revenue only if the price of gas rose.

Much of McDonnell's transportation record appeals to fiscal conservatives. He ordered an audit that turned up $1.4 billion in unspent transportation funds. He also forced reforms at the high-flying board overseeing Metrorail's $5.6 billion Silver Line.

Del. David Albo, R-Fairfax, said that when it comes to road money in a state like Virginia, "It's never enough." But $500 million a year in new revenue would at least cover the cost of road maintenance, so the state can stop dipping into funds for new construction when it needs to make repairs.

"If he solves the maintenance shortfall, which is $500 million a year, he has achieved something that three governors previous couldn't get done," Albo said. "It's a very, very big advance."

Charters' Expulsion Rate Soars

Schools are kicking out higher number of students than DCPS

Washington

The District's public charter schools have expelled students at a far higher rate than the city's traditional public schools in recent years, according to school data, highlighting a key difference between two sectors that compete for the District's students and taxpayer dollars.

D.C. charter schools expelled 676 students in the past three years, while the city's traditional public schools expelled 24, according to a Washington Post review of school data.

During the 2011-12 school year, when charters enrolled 41 percent of the city's students, they removed 227 children for discipline violations and had an expulsion rate of 72 per 10,000 students; the District school system removed three and had an expulsion rate of less than 1 per 10,000 students.

The discrepancy underscores the freedom that charters — publicly funded schools that operate independently of the traditional school system — have from school system policies.

That autonomy defines the charter movement and gives its schools considerable latitude to decide what student behavior

Meanwhile...

D.C.'s Office of the State Superintendent of Education in August proposed rules that would govern discipline policies at all public schools, including charters. They called for minimizing suspension and expulsion of children 13 and younger and outlined due process rights for students. Charter leaders mounted a vigorous opposition, saying the federal law that established D.C. charters frees them from such local mandates. City officials are now reviewing the proposed rules and may revise them. (TWP)

they will — and won't — tolerate. Parents and activists say some charters expel excessively and with little oversight, shedding disruptive students who then end up enrolling midyear in the traditional school system, which is legally bound to take them.

The D.C. school system can compel students to transfer from one school to another.

But unlike charters, the school system cannot truly expel anyone because of its mandate to serve all students. "Expelled" students are sent to an alternative middle school or high school for one year.

Many charter schools — 60 out of 97 campuses — did not expel students in 2011-12. That same school year, seven expelled at least 10 students. EMMA BROWN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Navy Annex Set for Demolition

Arlington

Washington's Navy Annex is coming down, more than 70 years after it was built as a temporary warehouse.

Crews have begun tearing down the walls of the annex, which later served for more than 50 years as Marine Corps headquarters. Demolition is expected to be completed by September, and the 42-acre site will then be turned over to neighboring Arlington National Cemetery to provide additional grave sites.

William Brazis, director of the Pentagon's Washington Headquarters Service, told The Washington Post that the complex isn't architecturally pleasing. Brazis says it was built to be a warehouse and it showed.

Seven four-story wings at the Annex once were home to 6,000 workers. An eighth wing was torn down in 2004 to make room for the Air Force Memorial.

"The old joke is there's nothing in Washington as permanent as a temporary building," said G. Martin Moeller Jr., senior curator

Cell Towers Added for Inauguration

Washington

Extra cellphone towers are being installed on the National Mall to handle the heavy use expected from smartphones during the presidential inauguration.

The Washington Post reports officials are trying to prevent the kind of overload of the wireless system that was caused by the huge crowd four years ago.

Sen. Charles Schumer, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies, says they're taking measures to ensure people can call, tweet and post messages on Facebook because the inauguration is a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

AT&T says it will have nine temporary cell towers running the length of the mall and others along the parade route. Sprint says it has three temporary towers around the mall. (AP)

Make Car-Sharing Work for You

Zipcar is convenient, but is it better than a traditional rental?

Personal Finance

The ability to access a car quickly and give it back after a few hours is exploding in popularity among both college students and carless city dwellers.

Zipcar created the car-sharing concept in 2000. By the end of the decade, car-sharing had caught the attention of the two largest U.S. car rental companies, as Enterprise and Hertz started competing services. And last week, Avis, the country's No. 3 car rental company, jumped in by offering nearly $500 million to buy Zipcar.

Here's a look at how Zipcar works, for whom it works best and what it costs.

How It Works

Car-sharing is far quicker than a traditional rental — with Zipcar and its car-sharing brethren, customers leave a car in a city parking lot, garage or in an assigned parking space on a college campus. “Zipsters,” as Zipcar calls its customers, then find the car with the name tag that matches their reservation. Viewing the make and model on the company's smartphone app allows for easier spotting.

The car is locked and unlocked with a membership “Zipcard.” The keys are stashed under the dash.

Zipcar customers fuel up using a gas card that's stored in each car.

Car-sharers can extend their rental through the mobile app as long as another member hasn't reserved the car already. To return the car, the renter brings it back to a marked parking space and swipes the Zipcard on the windshield.

What It Costs

To join Zipcar, members pay a $25 application fee and $50 a year. Rates start at $7.50 an hour and include gas, insurance and any mileage up to 180 miles a day. By comparison, Hertz on Demand Standard car rental prices vary widely but generally range between $50 and $100 per day in big cities.

The Pros and Cons

You're generally not charged for mileage if you're renting from Hertz or Avis. “Zipsters” have to pay for any trip longer than 180 miles. For a long weekend trip, a Zipcar might not be your best bet. And once you go beyond 24 hours, car-sharing is generally more expensive than a standard rental.

Zipcars aren't often checked for cleanliness or gas in between renters (they ask that you keep a quarter-tank at all times). That can be a downside compared with standard car rentals.

But drivers only have to be 21 to rent a Zipcar, or 18 if they're renting it from a university campus and have a clean driving record. Most renters have to be 25 to rent through a traditional rental car company, though younger drivers can sometimes rent for an extra per-day fee. SAMANTHA BOMKAMP (AP)

BCS Collision Course

Storied programs try to add another title to illustrious history

Sometimes, the buildup to a game can overwhelm what actually happens on the field.

Certainly, No. 1 Notre Dame and No. 2 Alabama would have to play nothing less than a classic to live up to all the hype for Monday night's BCS championship game.

The contest, in balmy South Florida, has been shaping up as one of the most anticipated games in years, a throwback to the era when Keith Jackson & Co. called one game a week, when it was a big deal for teams from different parts of the country to meet in a bowl game, when everyone took sides based on where they happened to live.

North vs. South. Rockne vs. Bear. Rudy vs. Forrest Gump.

The Fighting Irish vs. the Crimson Tide.

College football's two most storied programs, glorified in movie and song, facing off for the biggest prize.

"It's definitely not any other game," Alabama linebacker C.J. Mosley said.

For the Crimson Tide (12-1), this is a chance to be remembered as a dynasty. Alabama will be trying to claim its third national championship in four years and become the first school to win back-to-back Bowl Championship Series titles, a remarkable achievement given the ever-increasing parity of the college game and having to replace five players from last year's title team who were picked in the first two rounds of the NFL Draft.

"To be honest, I think this team has kind of exceeded expectations," Alabama coach Nick Saban said Sunday. "If you look at all the players we lost last year, the leadership that we lost ... I'm really proud of what this team was able to accomplish."

That said, it's not a huge surprise to find Alabama playing for another title. That's not the case when it comes to Notre Dame.

Despite their impressive legacy, the Fighting Irish (12-0) weren't even ranked at the start of the season. But overtime wins against Stanford and Pittsburgh, combined with three other victories by a touchdown or less, gave Notre Dame a shot at its first national title since 1988.

After so many lost years, the golden dome has reclaimed its luster in coach Brian Kelly's third season.

"It starts with setting a clear goal for the program," Kelly said. "Are we here to get to a bowl game, or are we here to win national championships? So the charge immediately was to play for championships and win a national championship."

Bills to Hire Marrone

The Buffalo Bills have reached an agreement to hire Syracuse's Doug Marrone as their next coach, two people familiar with talks told the Associated Press on Sunday. Marrone will replace Chan Gailey, who was fired last Monday, a day after the Bills closed their second consecutive season with a 6-10 record. TV Lineup WIZARDS (7 P.M., CSN) The Thunder (26-7) own the best record in the league and will face the lowly Wizards (4-27) at Verizon Center. Washington did shock Oklahoma City 105-102 last year.

COLLEGE HOOPS (6:30 P.M., ESPN2) No. 14 Cincinnati has lost two of three after opening the season 12-0 and will host No. 21 Notre Dame.

Tide Dynasty?

A win over Notre Dame on Monday night would give reigning national champion Alabama its third BCS title in four years. Alabama coach Nick Saban has flourished when he's had more than a month to prepare for an opponent: The Crimson Tide has won its past three bowl games by at least 16 points, including a 21-0 win over LSU last year. Lewis' Farewell Tour Rolls On as Ravens Stymie Colts

NFL

Ray Lewis' last ride now will take him to Denver.

Anquan Boldin, Joe Flacco and a staunch Baltimore defense made sure of that Sunday.

Boldin set a franchise record with 145 yards receiving, including the clinching touchdown, in the Ravens' 24-9 victory over Indianapolis in an AFC wild-card game. The win delays star linebacker Lewis' retirement for at least another week as Baltimore (11-6) heads to Denver on Saturday. (The Broncos beat the Ravens 34-17 three weeks ago.)

Lewis even lined up at fullback for the final kneel-down in his last home game of a 17-year career, then went into a short version of his trademark dance before being mobbed by teammates.

He followed with a victory lap, his right arm, covered by a brace, held high in salute to the fans.

Sunday's victory also enhanced the Ravens' success rate in opening playoff games. Flacco now has won at least one postseason game in all five of his pro seasons, the only quarterback to do it in the Super Bowl era.

His main target Sunday was Boldin, who had receptions of 50 and 46 yards, plus his 18-yard TD on a floater from Flacco in the corner of the end zone with 9:14 to go.

Baltimore overcame the first two lost fumbles of the season by Ray Rice, too, as John Harbaugh became the first coach with wins in his first five playoff campaigns.

Backup halfback Bernard Pierce rescued Rice with a 43-yard burst that led to Boldin's touchdown, and ran for 103 yards.

The loss ended the Colts' turnaround season in which they went from 2-14 in 2011 to the playoffs in coach Chuck Pagano's first year in Indianapolis (11-6). Pagano missed 12 weeks while undergoing treatment for leukemia and returned last week.

Offensive coordinator Bruce Arians, who went 9-3 as interim coach, was absent Sunday after being hospitalized with an undisclosed illness. Quarterback coach Clyde Christensen called the plays, but Baltimore's suddenly revitalized defense — inspired by Lewis' pending retirement — never let standout rookie QB Andrew Luck get comfortable. Tentative agreement ends NHL lockout after nearly four months

NHL

It took 113 days and 625 canceled regular-season games, but the NHL lockout mercifully ended early Sunday as the league and the players' association reached an agreement on the framework of a new collective bargaining agreement.

"We have to dot a lot of i's and cross a lot of t's," NHL commissioner Gary Bettman told reporters Sunday. "There is still a lot of work to be done, but the basic framework has been agreed upon."

The NHL, eight years removed from becoming the only league in North American professional sports history to lose an entire season to labor strife, narrowly avoided doing it again around 5 a.m. Sunday. The tentative agreement came just days before the league-imposed deadline; Bettman confirmed last week that a deal needed to be in place no later than Friday in order to play a 48-game season.

According to reports, the new collective bargaining agreement is for 10 years (with a mutual opt-out clause after eight years) and includes a 50-50 revenue split, a $64.3 million salary cap ceiling in 2013-14 and contract term limits of seven years (eight if a team is re-signing its own players).

As of Sunday afternoon, the NHL had not officially announced dates for training camp or the start of the regular season, but various reports indicated training camp will start this week and as early as Wednesday. The season could start as early as Jan. 15.

Meanwhile, several Washington Capitals took to Twitter to share their excitement.

"Best day of my life!" Caps defenseman Mike Green tweeted.

Caps forward Wojtek Wolski tweeted: "A big thanks to everyone who put in the time to get this deal done. Great news to wake up to."

Perfect Timing?

Ten years after ABC began making trouble when it tried to steal late-night stars from CBS and NBC to replace "Nightline," the network will finally move homegrown talent Jimmy Kimmel into the news magazine's time slot Tuesday. When Kimmel claims his spot at 11:35 p.m., he'll take on two towering figures — and the men ABC had tried to pinch: CBS's David Letterman and NBC's Jay Leno.

Television

"I know moving from midnight to 11:35 might not sound like a big deal — it's only 25 minutes — but it's probably the most important 25 minutes of my life, since the first 14 times I had sex," Kimmel told his audience the day ABC announced "Jimmy Kimmel Live's" promotion.

Jay and Dave, meanwhile, have reacted in a big way to TV's biggest move of the first quarter.

Leno's starting his "Tonight" show one minute earlier — at 11:34 p.m. — to get a jump on Kimmel this week. "Late Show" host Letterman, on the other hand, recently paid a visit to Kimmel's show to wish him the best.

On Tuesday, "JKL" will have a shiny new set but will still be located at the El Capitan Theatre on Hollywood Boulevard — its sidewalk chockablock with Frankensteins and Chewbaccas — the perfect backdrop for Kimmel's popular man-on-the-street video bits. A handful of features have been added to the rotation in the weeks leading up to the show's return from holiday break. Other than that, Kimmel says, he will be "pretty much doing the same show."

He dismisses suggestions that ABC will want him to "broaden the show, or make it more wholesome."

When "Jimmy Kimmel Live" debuted on Jan. 26, 2003, the rumpled, sallow-skinned couch potato

In April, he hosted the White House Correspondents' Dinner.

In July, his show received its first Primetime Emmy Award nomination.

In September, Kimmel hosted the Emmy Awards for the first time and got mostly rave reviews.

In October, Kimmel — who's been obsessed with Letterman, left, since he was a youngster and says he got into TV in hopes of becoming Dave's friend — took his show to Brooklyn to kiss Letterman's ring and wound up staring down Hurricane Sandy. (TWP)

eschewed opening monologues, refused to wear a suit and had been heard to say, "I would kill myself if I was forced to interview C-level celebrities and pretend to be interested in them."

Nowadays, Kimmel is considerably slimmed down and gets his bald spot covered up by a makeup artist. He wears dapper suits and ties to interview "Dancing With the Stars" rejects. His show has become very much a traditional late-night talk show — only hipper around the edges. He continues to be the best deadpan cipher in the business.

Kimmel doesn't expect to beat Jay or Dave when he moves to 11:35, but he thinks ratings will increase, if only because more people are awake than at midnight.

"Never count Jay out," Kimmel says. "He's like Jason in 'Friday the 13th.' He seems to pop up just when you think he's dead — he comes alive, and he's got a hatchet."

When asked how he can take down Letterman, his boyhood idol, Kimmel has a ready answer:

"It's like if Nolan Ryan is pitching to you. You still have to try to hit the ball, no matter how many baseball cards you might have in your bedroom or posters of him on the wall."

Detective Joanna Padgett Locasto (Meagan Good) infiltrates a wealthy family to try and uncover its secrets in "Deception."

An Exhausting Mystery

It's difficult to keep up with 'Deception's' numerous plot twists

Television Review

NBC 10:00 While watching NBC's new series "Deception," it's hard not to notice the parallels to ABC's hit drama "Revenge." From a dead body in the opening scenes, to the story of a scorned woman who embeds herself in a wealthy family to take them down from the inside, it's sort of "Revenge"-lite, without the likable characters but with about a dozen extra tangled subplots.

In "Deception," the scorned woman is Joanna Padgett Locasto (Meagan Good), a New York police detective wrangled by the FBI to work on a possible homicide investigation. Vivian Bowers, a 32-year-old socialite and party girl, has been found dead on the floor of a hotel room, and no one's buying that it was due to a drug overdose. That's because Vivian's an heiress to the billion-dollar Bowers Pharmaceutical fortune, and her family has been skating around the law for years. The FBI is convinced that this case will finally bring the family to justice, and since Joanna is Vivian's former best friend, she's the perfect one to expose their illegal activities.

The fact that a seasoned cop like Joanna happens to be Vivian's ex-BFF is hard to buy, and it's even more difficult to believe that the family, with all of its secrets, would so eagerly welcome her into the fold.

Joanna arrives, wearing a wire, for Vivian's memorial service, armed with a story about an abusive husband who drove her away from home. Almost immediately, the Bowers family patriarch, Robert (Victor Garber), offers Joanna a job and a room in the family's estate.

Daddy Bowers is either the dumbest possibly evil billionaire chief executive ever, or he's a believer in keeping his enemies close. Either way, this sets the stage for Joanna to poke around, slowly unearthing clues about various misdeeds as she further infiltrates the family.

Though on the surface the show is being marketed as "Who killed Vivian Bowers?" it's not enough to have one arc on this kind of series. Instead, "Deception" falls prey to the exhaustive method of too-much-storytelling, adding layer upon layer of mini-mysteries and twists until the weary viewer needs a detailed map to keep track — or turns off the show entirely.

Author In Good Company

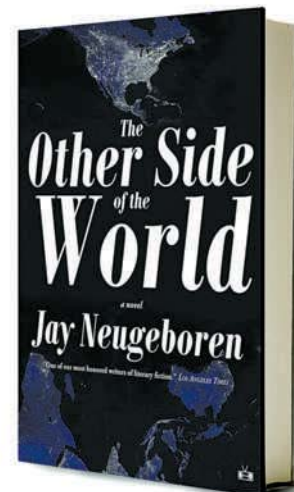

Jay Neugeboren's 18th novel recalls Philip Roth's style

Book Review

This fall when Philip Roth told an interviewer that he'd stopped writing novels, the commentaries that surged forth might as well have been obituaries. Which writer would continue to honor well-made sentences? Who would capture America's roiling moral anxiety? And was there anybody left who could do it through tormented, sex-obsessed Jewish men?

For those who feel needed by those questions, Jay Neugeboren's "The Other Side of the World" ($16.50, Two Dollar Radio) might be the tonic they're hoping for. Neugeboren has written in relative obscurity for decades — this is his 18th book — but the linguistic precision, wry humor and libidinal neurosis contained in his fine new novel put him in good company with the recently retired master.

The half-intellectual, half-rake aspect of the story's hero, Charlie, certainly has a familiar, Rothian cast. He's just returned home to Northampton, Mass., from Singapore, where he's spent three years sowing his oats and making a bundle working for a palm-oil company run by Nick, a college buddy. The job was pitched to him as a green-energy gig, but as Charlie, the son of a novelist and literary scholar, discovered, it wasn't.

That's the least of his moral quandaries. First, Charlie is implicated in Nick's death. Second, back in the States, he begins his journey of personal reckoning by stealing away his father's young girlfriend, Seana, a best-selling author.

The setup is plastic and absurd. But that sense of unreality is deliberate and gives the story urgency and energy. There's a comic glint to Neugeboren's take on heavy issues — noblesse oblige, anti-Semitism, environmental exploitation, our hunger for parenthood — that doesn't diminish their seriousness.

"The Other Side of the World" is effectively about a road trip Charlie and Seana take from Massachusetts to Brooklyn. Yet the mood feels epic. Neugeboren's invocations of classic writers bolster the sense of gravitas: James, Waugh, Greene and, yes, Roth. Neugeboren returns again and again to the notion that writing is not only how we make sense of the world but how we make it, period.

Pumped-Up Drama

A special two-hour episode of "The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills" (9 p.m., Bravo) sets the stage for the premiere of Lisa Vanderpump's spin-off, "Vanderpump Rules." The show features Lisa, above, trying to maintain control over the passionate and volatile staff of her Hollywood restaurant, SUR — including server Scheana Marie, who had an affair with Eddie Cibrian while he was still married to Lisa's co-star Brandi Glanville. Brittany Burkett, William Jackson Brittany, 23, is a bank teller. William, 27, is a developer at Accenture. They live in Alexandria.

THE MAIN EVENT: The couple wed at a gazebo outside an Alexandria courthouse on Aug. 20, 2012. Just Brittany, William and their parents were present.

HOW THEY MET: In an online chat room.

FIRST DATE: Dinner and a movie. "It was also our first meeting in person and there was instant attraction, which led to lots of kissing in the theater," Brittany says. "To this day, I still haven't seen all of 'Rush Hour 3.'"

OH, MEMORIES: "My favorite part was reciting my vows. I had been dreaming of that moment my entire life," Brittany says.

FUNNIEST MOMENT: "My mom turned to Brittany's mom and said, 'Stop crying. I can hear you in the video.'"

FAMILY TRADITIONS: Brittany wore her mother's pearl necklace, a family heirloom.

WEDDING JITTERS: It was their parents' first meeting, but everyone got along great, Brittany says.

IF I COULD TURN BACK TIME: "I would invite my sister," Brittany says. "I don't know how I would've made it to this point in my life without her."

Jessica Duarte, Hector Sosa

Jessica, 35, works at an environmental nonprofit. Hector, 35, is a staff sergeant in the Army. They live in Germantown, Md.

THE MAIN EVENT: They'll tie the knot May 18 in D.C.

HOW THEY MET: In high school. They reconnected through Facebook in 2009.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS: She was "beautiful, but stuck-up." He was "such a nerd."

FIRST DATE: Her favorite restaurant, Lauriol Plaza.

HOW HE PROPOSED: "I thought he was going to sing a karaoke song, but he popped the question."

MOST HATED CLOTHING ITEM: Her cheetah-print shirt, his "grandpa" sweater with elbow patches.

FAMILY TRADITIONS: Hector will give Jessica 13 coins, "which symbolize the sharing and safeguarding of future gains. It also represents the acceptance of responsibility to ensure that the home we are building never lacks anything."

Andy Ludwig, Jill Seiferth

Andy, 30, manages energy efficiency projects at George Washington University. Jill, 30, is a lawyer. They live in Arlington.

THE MAIN EVENT: They got hitched Oct. 6, 2012, at a vineyard on Long Island.

HOW THEY MET: In Tokyo, when the two of them were English teachers.

FIRST DATE: He invited her over for dinner and cooked nothing but carbs: potato croquettes on pasta with garlic bread.

FUNNIEST WEDDING MOMENT:

When Jill's 3-year-old nephew, the ringbearer, refused to hand over the rings. "He was so nervous."

ONE FOR THE SCRAPBOOK: The couple's first dance started out as 311's "Amber," but segued into "Gangnam Style," "pony dance moves and all,"

Jill says. Later, they played "Gangnam Style" a second time, and "the whole party got really into it, with people diving under legs and all," Andy says.

FAVORS AND DECORATIONS:

Because they met in Tokyo, the couple folded hundreds of origami cranes for boutonnières and favors.

IF I COULD TURN BACK TIME: Andy would have added fireworks. "The good kind."

B.I.O. By Invitation Only If you'd like to see your wedding or commitment ceremony in B.I.O., send your favorite informal photograph (wacky is fine, but please don't send a formal engagement shot), plus your names and ceremony date to weddings@readexpress.com. Please contact us at least one month before your wedding. We'll get back to you with questions.

“Never, under ANY circumstances, take a sleeping pill and a laxative on the same night.”
— @KANESHOW, radio host at HOT 99.5, offers a bit of advice for balancing out medications.

“There’s a reason why, even at her young [age], Elle Fanning is already one of the top actresses around. She’s been making mature films beyond her years since the very beginning, but the most adult of them all arrives later this year with Sally Potter’s coming-of-age tale, ‘Ginger & Rosa.’” reacts to the new trailer for the movie, which he describes as “set in London during the turbulent 1960s,” planned for release on March 15.
— TRAVIS HOPSON AT PUNCHDRUNKCRITICS.COM

“If you try to choke someone on land, chances are you’ll get beaten up and have the cops called on you. If you try to do the same thing 30,000 feet in the air, you get taped to your chair.”
— FERNANDO ALFONSO III AT DAILYDOT.COM
remarks on the story of a man who was bound to a chair and gagged after he became unruly on a New York-bound Icelandair flight last week.

“For anyone who’s ever dreamt of supplanting that hack Laura Linney as the host of Masterpiece Classic, Janie Haddad Tompkins has just released a video laying out a potentially viable plan.”
— AUSTIN BERNHARDT AT AVCLUB.COM
loved the comedian’s rehearsal tape, in which she “cracks under the pressure, or gets too distracted by Instagram, or forgets the name of the show and proves ultimately unable to deliver her lines.”

“Alright, time to go spend the day with the family I’ll be largely neglecting over the next five months or so in favor of hockey.”
— @JAPERSRINK, a hockey blogger, decided to log quality time with his relatives after the NHL reached a deal Sunday to end its lockout.

Improve depressive symptoms faster?

Effective medications for treating depression can take weeks or months to achieve their full effects.

NIH researchers seek depressed persons ages 18-65 (unipolar or bipolar) to enroll in a research study involving an experimental drug when compared to placebo. The study seeks to better understand and evaluate the mechanisms in the brain that are related to rapid antidepressant improvement.

This is a 6-to 8-week outpatient and inpatient research study. Research is conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland. Understanding how the rapid reduction of symptoms works may help us design better antidepressants.

Horoscope

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You expect to be notified when things happen that affect you, even indirectly — but that may be an unreliable plan today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You're trying something that has never been tried before, at least not in the way you envision it, so there is quite a "buzz" at this time!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You are able to come through even when the powers that be ask for that which is nearly impossible. Today is no exception.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your ability to communicate openly and honestly with others, without being judgmental or aggressive, must come to the fore.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have to take on additional duties today to account for that which is not being done by someone else. You have his or her back!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You are looking for something near and dear to you, but in fact it may not be missing at all. Look closer to home; there it is!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're not about to put in any more work on a project that you think is a lost cause. It's time for you to unveil a new plan.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You cannot control everything, even though you may want to — so be willing to let go of those things that others seem to control.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone is likely to come to you with an offer of work. You want to accept because it will allow you to show off a new skill.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You know better than others what is happening beneath the surface today — but it may not yet be the time to reveal it to the general public.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You're in for a surprise if you expect things to follow a familiar pattern today. Nothing is likely to make that kind of sense!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You'll want to make sure that others know what you are up to before swinging into action; surprises can prove dangerous.

Photos acquired by TMZ.com show Justin Bieber smoking a substance that looks like marijuana. The pictures, from Jan. 2, were allegedly shot during a party in a Newport Beach, Calif., hotel. Unnamed sources say the substance was indeed pot. Bieber's camp did not directly address the leaked photos. The teen singer tweeted on Jan. 5, "Everyday growing and learning. Trying to be better. U get knocked down, u get up. I see all of u. I hear all of u. I never want to let any of you down. I love u." (EXPRESS)

The Washington Post Young Journalists Development Program (YJDP) and the Washington Association of Black Journalists present the Urban Journalism Workshop (UJW). The workshop gives high school students in the Washington area an inside look at careers in journalism. Experienced journalists from The Washington Post, the Associated Press, National Public Radio and other media companies teach UJW students the basics of real-time journalism. Three scholarship awards will be presented to seniors who excel during the workshop and demonstrate strong research, reporting and writing ability. There is no fee to apply or attend.

Fast Facts:

- ✓ Workshops meet for eight consecutive Saturdays from March 2 – April 27.
- ✓ Sessions run from 9:30 a.m. – 4:00 p.m. at various sites throughout Washington, D.C.
- ✓ Scholarships will be based on an essay, stories produced in the workshop and participation in all eight sessions.
- ✓ All students attending high schools in the Washington area are encouraged to apply.
- ✓ Applications must be postmarked or delivered by Friday, January 25, 2013.

How do I apply?
